

After Covid-19 was over I was finally able to go out into the world with my new buddy machine. As I stepped out I noticed a lot of things had appeared that I couldn't identify. But thanks to my buddy I could ask it to scan the item and tell me what the item was. It went over to the item and began to scan after it scanned it, my buddy said it was an old broken radio from the 60's. I guess I was stuck in the house for too long that I forgot how a radio looked. As we were about to leave a hungry cat tried to attack us, but as it was getting closer to us I grabbed my buddy and it turned into a baton, helping to defend myself against the cat. After the incident we kept walking and exploring the outside world and identifying items as we went. Even though it is a machine I treat it as a friend or pet because it is always there to help and I make sure all the part on it are functioning to the best of their abilities.
